Dear Senator Fulbright,

I am delighted that the public response to your position on Southeast Asia compels that you reply with a duplicated letter. But if the Senate member who apparently just glanced at my letter of January 29 looks at it again, he will find more in it that just approval of your position and the leadership you are giving - which is much more than the cause of peace, but addresses itself to the survival of the democratic system.

I do, however, ask I again for answers to these questions. Read them and reply. Any answer once you have on this or related subjects, and any you have ever given, supported with, particularly with regards to the [illegible] statements, evidence to it and the consequences.

Should my letter be refused, I am now in an even better position to inform you about some of the things referred to in it.

Sincerely yours,
